Bears growing more bold

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Bear encounters continue to be a major concern across Haliburton County. Bears have entered numerous homes and cottages in search of food. Several bears have been shot this year by police officers and people protecting their property, livestock and pets.

Bears are an increasing problem at Haliburton County dumps.

Gerald Bain, CEO of Algonquin Highlands, said bears are a problem at all five of the municipality's landfill sites.

"The problems are a lot greater at the Maple Lake and Dorset landfill sites," he said. He noted that bear numbers have increased dramatically and some of the bears are showing aggressive behavior.

Minden man seriously injured in truck crash

Police say high school athlete was not wearing a seatbelt

by ANDY LLOYD & DARREN LUM

A young man from the Gelert area is suffering from life threatening head injuries after his pickup truck veered off County Road 121 west of Haliburton on Friday night. Mathew McElwain, 19, was alone in the vehicle at the time of the crash.

The OPP have determined McElwain was traveling at a high speed when he lost control of the truck. The vehicle entered the north ditch, struck a culvert and rolled over several times before it came to rest in the ditch. McElwain, who was not wearing his seatbelt, was thrown from the vehicle.

An eyewitness, who was following the pickup truck along County Road 121, said the driver was thrown out of the cab and into the box of the truck. The same man said he saw one of the pickup's tires blow out when it hit the shoulder. McElwain was conscious after the crash, according to witnesses.

The OPP, the Dysart Fire Department and Haliburton Ambulance all responded to the crash.

The accident happened near Kashaga Drive. Witnesses said debris from the accident was scattered along a 60 to 80 metre stretch of the highway. Police closed the road for most of the night to investigate the scene.

A man who lives about a kilometre away from the accident site said he heard a strange noise around 9 p.m., when the crash occurred. "All of a sudden I heard this loud bang that sounded like a jet. I found it strange."

McElwain has worked as a bartender at Wigamog Inn for the past year. Friday was his night off. Coworkers said he was on his way from Haliburton to the Wigamog to meet up with some friends at the time of accident.

McElwain was the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School male athlete of the year in 2001, then in Grade 12. He was never the best player on the senior basketball team, but his incredible determination and unrelenting spirit won him the award.

Paramedics prepare to transport Mathew McElwain from the scene of an accident on County Road 121 Friday night. The 19 year old from the Gelert area was westbound and alone in a Mazda pickup truck when the vehicle left the roadway and flipped several times. He was transported to Haliburton Hospital and later flown to Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto by air ambulance. McElwain was a top athlete during his years at Haliburton high school. The food factor:

Bears always look for the easiest source

"We even have a couple that are helping people take the garbage out of the trunks of their cars," he said with a mixture of concern and humour. "We feel the problem has become really serious," he said.

The Maple Lake dump has a resident population of about 15 bears, with six or seven around the dump on a continuous basis.

The presence of bears, in some cases, isn't the biggest problem; it's their boldness. "They have no fear whatsoever," Bain said.

Landfill attendants at the Maple Lake and Dorset dumps have been issued with "bear bangers" — noise makers designed to scare bears away. But bears soon become accustomed to the noise and ignore it. Bain said the municipality is considering supplying shotguns with non-lethal ammunition (rubber projectiles which will cause the bears some pain without any danger of serious injury) at landfill sites where bears are particularly troublesome.

Some members of the public are very concerned about bears at the landfill sites, and the municipality shares that safety concern, as well as the worry about liability. "We (the municipality) allow people to go into the landfill sites, so there is some responsibility associated with that," Bain said. "Our biggest fear is that there may be a serious injury or fatality before something is done."

Bain said he would be happy to see the spring bear hunt reinstated. "The cancellation of the spring bear hunt has certainly had an impact [on the bear problems]," he said.

Bob Romberg, Environmental and Property Operations Manager for the Township of Minden Hills, concurs that bears are an increasing problem. "There's bears all over the place," he said. He noted that some very aggressive bear behavior has been observed, especially at the Ingoldsby landfill site. False charges and bears coming right up to people unloading garbage from their vehicles is an all too common occurrence.

"A lot of the tourists seem to think bears are cuddly," Romberg said. "They don't realize they are wild animals." He added that bears should be afforded the respect they deserve as potentially dangerous animals. "All of our landfill sites are posted with signs explaining that bears are unpredictable," Romberg said.

Minden Hills has contacted the Ministry of Natural Resources to arrange a training session for landfill attendants so they will know how best to deal with bears. "We're just waiting for the company that provides the attendant services to tell us when the attendants will be available," Romberg said.

Maria de Almeida is a biologist with the MNR in Peterborough who specializes in large carnivores. She said the ministry's emphasis is on education through literature, fridge magnets and other means to help the public understand and live with bears. She said a network of authorized agents is assisting with nuisance bear concerns. In some areas, such as the Minden district, MNR personnel are still dealing with bear complaints. Partnerships with municipalities and police forces are being established to provide assistance whenever possible, she noted.

The ministry biologist noted that bears are programmed to find food and they will take advantage of the easiest food sources. In the process, she said, "they can become very tolerant of people." She suggested taking precautions to avoid attracting bears, such as taking down bird feeders for the summer. She pointed out that birds don't need to be fed in the summer.

De Almeida also noted that some people enjoy watching bears and have been known to feed them in order to attract them. "One person can create problems for all the people in the neighbourhood," she said. She suggested a community or neighbourhood approach aimed at avoiding contact with bears.

Resource Technician Bart Hilhorst of the Minden District Ministry of Natural Resources was the guest speaker at the annual general meeting of the Galway, Cavendish and Harvey Ratepayers' acquired enough body fat the eggs are aborted and absorbed by the sow's body.

Bears are omnivorous, which means they will eat both plant and animal matter. "No more than 10 per cent of their diet is meat," Hilhorst pointed out.

"They like going for anything that's easy," he said. "Bags of garbage don't run."

Hilhorst said bears are believed to be intelligent, probably more so than wolves. "They learn quickly how to open fridges and freezers," he said.

Hilhorst said he expects the number of nuisance bear calls to decrease over the next few weeks as the various berry crops ripen. "When the berries come out the bears go for the high protein and sugar content," he said. He pointed out that they often travel great distances in search of food, which can result in a series of sightings along their path.

Hilhorst cited a few anecdotes to illustrate the things some people do that may inadver-adding that people are often as much the problem as the bears. "I've seen people feeding bears at the dump... bringing them sandwiches." He noted that if a bear is hungry, a person isn't going to stand in its way.

Mother and cub at Maple Lake dump

He recommends scaring bears away when they are in places where they are unwanted. "Let them know they're not going to get away with it," he said.

Removing the temptation is the best way to solve bear encounter problems. "If he finds food, he'll be back," Hilhorst said. "It could take a week or two for him to realize the food source is gone."

Trapping and relocating bears is not the answer to the problem. Hilhorst said when one bear is removed, another one will take its place.

"Trapping and relocating bears is a second-last resort," he said. "Sometimes moving a bear is so people don't go nuts."

Shooting bears when there is a genuine concern for safety or property damage is legal, but Hilhorst said that is the last resort.

Hilhorst was asked how the number of nuisance bear calls over the past few years compares to the calls the ministry received in the mid-1990s. He said the average number of such calls eight to 10 years ago was 30 a year. As of July 12, when he made his presentation, this year's number of calls had topped 220.

"Hunting is the best tool to control bear populations," Hilhorst said. "There aren't as many hunters as there used to be." He said the difficulty in obtaining licences, firearm permits and the registration of firearms may be among the reasons why people are not as interested in hunting as they used to be.

Hilhorst believes people can learn to live with bears and education is the key.

"If a bear is in your yard, it's not a safety issue," he said. "If it is in your house, call the OPP, in which case it will likely be shot. The really bold ones may be better eliminated."

During the question period after his presentation, Hilhorst was asked what a person should do in the event of a bear attack. He explained that running from a black bear could trigger a predatory attack. He suggested yelling and holding a jacket or shirt out to make yourself bigger. And, if worse comes to worst, fight back. He said playing dead, which is a recommended tactic against grizzly bear attacks, isn't effective against black bears.

The best way to avoid bear problems is to remove the temptation of food. Bears have a keen sense of smell and can detect the odour of food from as distant as a mile away. Suppressing those tantalizing odours can be a challenge, but it may be the key to keeping encounters to a minimum, he suggested.

This orphaned cub was picked up north of West Guilford by MNR officials, and taken to a rehabilitation centre north of Huntsville called 'Bear With Us'

Association. He talked about bears and offered some tips to avoid unwanted encounters.

Hilhorst approached the subject with a sense of humour and many years of experience in dealing with bears.

"Consider a bear a great big raccoon," Hilhorst said. "They are part of the same family."

Hilhorst said it helps to understand bears. "They're born to eat," he said. "They know they have to eat to survive hibernation."

Black bears spend from April to November fattening up in preparation for hibernation. A bear that hasn't put on enough fat reserves won't survive the winter hibernation period. Fat reserves are especially important to pregnant sows. Hilhorst explained that the breeding season is in the summer but fertilized eggs remain dormant until late in the year and if the bear hasn't tently attract bears. He told the audience of a gazebo that was demolished because a bear couldn't reach a hummingbird feeder. The resourceful animal tried to climb the gazebo to reach the feeder, but it wasn't sturdy enough to support the bear's weight and the structure collapsed. "If you want hummingbirds around, grow more flowers," he suggested.

He spoke of another incident where a bear went into a shed to retrieve a garbage bag. The property owner couldn't understand why the bear was interested in what was in the bag, but when Hilhorst looked, he found some stale donuts. He drew a chorus of laughter when he said, "I use donuts for bait. I'm pretty much guaranteed to catch either a bear or a cop."

Hilhorst said many bears have become accustomed to the presence of humans. "People don't bother them much," he said,

Max Ward and his wife, Amanda Austin, will be involved with the community, as he ministers to three local churches: Minden, Carnarvon and Maple Lake

New United Church Minister eager to meet parishioners

Max Ward eager to begin his new posting

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

Ministers usually have an aversion to talking about themselves – that whole dedicating-their-life-to-serving-God-and-their-parishioners usually taking precedence – but Max Ward was eager to tell his story. This way, as he makes the rounds greeting the members of his new parish of Highlands Hills Pastoral Charge, he can spend more time listening to them instead of explaining his own history.

Ward has just recently moved to the manse "on the hill" and will be ministering to the United Churches in Minden, Carnarvon and Maple Lake. His wife, Amanda Austin, has joined him in Minden and is expecting their first child. The couple's number one choice for Ward's first posting was Minden so they could be close to her family in Bracebridge.

Ward is quite familiar with small town life as he grew up across the street from a United Church in south-western Ontario. Although he spent a childhood active in the church, in 1998 he went to Sir Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo to study for a degree in accounting. He says it quickly became apparent that becoming an accountant did not feel right. As a strange feeling grew in his stomach, he prayed for direction.

At first he toyed with the idea of doing tax accounting along with lay preaching but received some invaluable advice to just study ministry whole-heartedly. Ward says his advisor told him that he would never regret it. He also had a friend who was minister in training and the pair talked. He was accepted to Emmanuel College at the University of Toronto and felt things must be on the right track. However, in October of '99, in his first year at the college, the feeling in the pit of his stomach that he'd come to consider as his calling to ministry disappeared.

"I thought 'Oh no. I've just spent $5,000 on tuition.' So I talked to the Chaplain. I reflected back to the feeling and now compare it to a horse and rider. I'm the horse and Jesus is the rider. When I've got the bit and am going off track, that uncomfortable feeling is of being reined in and the pulling at the bit," says Ward.

He went on to complete his fourth year placement at the Hyde Park United Church in London and from there went on to the LeFroy United Church in Barrie. This posting, however, is his first real full-time job. He is replacing the Rev. Norm Thomas, who served the pastoral charge for two years.

The youngest in his class, Ward says it is interesting how the majority of students studying to become ministers are choosing to do so as a second career. Not long ago the college would have been dominated by young men. He is glad now to see diversity and also noted that about three-quarters of his class was female.

Now that the long years of education are over he is keen to get into the pastoral work of visiting and listening. His goal is to meet and have a chat with every one of his parishioners by the end of his first year. Ward admits to being a bit nervous about taking on the full responsibility for the three churches but is grateful to a supporting ministerial team so that he can rotate where he does services.

Traps will help monitor mosquitoes for WN virus

No evidence of West Nile found in the county

by ERIN TENNANT
Times staff

Minden is hosting the county's first mosquito traps for capturing and testing mosquitoes for the West Nile virus.

The Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit began placing traps in strategic sites in Minden at the start of the month, along with three other locations under the HKPR umbrella - Lindsay, Port Hope and Coburg.

Five carbon dioxide traps, which usually hang from a tree and attract the insects with a light, will be positioned for one night every week until September in undisclosed locations. About a hundred mosquitoes are caught in each trap in one night and in the morning the insects are collected and sent for analysis by species type to labs in St. Catharines and Waterloo.

The mosquitoes are then sent back to the health unit to test for evidence of the virus. Results from each pool are usually returned within two weeks.

The study means that the HKPR unit will for the first time gain insight into the kinds of mosquitoes we have in the county and whether or not they are strong or weak vectors of West Nile.

"We're watching for a high incidence of particular kinds of mosquitoes in particular areas," said the program's director at HKPR, Anne Alexander. "But this is just the beginning, so it's too early to distinguish any clear patterns."

In May, the HKPR board approved the spending of an additional $100,000 towards mosquito surveillance in the area - a motion which followed repeated requests from the health unit to the Ministry of Health and Long-term Care for more funding to purchase the $365 carbon dioxide traps.

Alexander said the $100,000 will probably be shared between the HKPR's reserve finances and the Ministry.

So far, HKPR has purchased an extra 10 traps. Last year, the health unit had just five traps, which were positioned in Port Hope throughout the summer.

The mosquito surveillance program will proceed with the testing of dead crows in the region. The virus usually builds up in the bird population before spilling over into the human population. Dead crows are good sentinels for evidence of the virus because they are especially susceptible to West Nile.

So far this summer, no crows or mosquito pools in the area have tested positive for the virus.

Only a mosquito that has bitten a West Nile-carrying bird can then pass the virus onto humans by biting them - an infected human cannot pass the disease to another human. The chances of falling ill from catching the virus are remote, however. Health Canada estimates that about one in five people will suffer noticeable symptoms such as a headache or muscle stiffness, while there's about a one percent chance that infected individuals will suffer severe symptoms such as inflammation of the brain or paralysis (last year 17 deaths in Ontario were linked to West Nile). Once someone has been infected with the virus once, they are then immune.

There are no available vaccines against the virus as yet, with victims offered supportive therapies.

People are encouraged to avoid mosquito bites by using repellent at dusk and dawn and wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants with light colours.

Derrell and Kim Stamp were the high bidders on a painting by West Guilford artist Brian Atyeo, right. The painting, titled "Marsh Light - Haliburton" is an original, compliments of the artist.

Lake Trout Project dinner brings in more than $25,000

The final total hasn't been calculated yet, but the OFAH Haliburton Lake Trout Project Dinner, held at the Delta Pinestone Resort on July 4 is expected to top $25,000.

Chair of the fund-raising event David Flowers said last year's net profit was $26,200 and he expects the total to be close to the same this year.

Proceeds from the event are shared by the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters and the Haliburton Lake Trout Project. The HLTP portion will go toward hatchery operation, educational programs and student employment. "We are also very pleased to announce that through the efforts of Eric Thompson and is HLTP Fund-Raising Committee, that a $1,000 Environmental Scholarship at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School has been established," Flowers said.

The OFAH share will help contribute conservation dollars to many worthwhile OFAH projects across the province.

"The Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association, the Ministry of Natural Resources and the OFAH are working in partnership to help develop and promote the Haliburton Lake Trout Project," Flowers said. "I would like to express my appreciation to the committee members who have given so much of their precious time to ensure that this event is a community success story." He called them ambassadors of the conservation effort.

The event featured raffles, door prizes, silent auction items and a live auction.

The feature artist for the event was Haliburton County's own Brian Atyeo, who donated an original painting, titled Marsh Light - Haliburton. Derrell and Kim Stamp were the winning bidders for the painting.

A draw for those who purchased their dinner tickets before the early bird deadline was won by Erica Walter of Minden. She won $1,000 cash.

Algonquin Highlands says Highlands East policing issue is for policing committee

by ANDY LLOYD
Times staff

Algonquin Highlands wasn't eager to wade into the debate over a Highlands East decision to withdraw from the county's policing services agreement.

Highlands East has decided it would rather be policed by the OPP out of Bancroft rather than the Haliburton Highlands detachment. But the county's other municipalities fear that move could have a negative impact on the level of policing in the Highlands.

Minden Hills recently passed a motion voicing its frustration with the move by Highlands East but Algonquin Highlands decided not to follow Minden Hills' lead at its July 17 council meeting.

"My problem with this is I don't think it has been handled properly from day one. I am not at all happy that the CPAC [community police association] committee has not been given the proper opportunity to deal with these problems. Until then I think individual municipalities should stay out of it," Reeve Eleanor Harrison said. "We have the committee in place to deal with it but right now the proper channels are not being used."

Deputy Reeve Don Shortreed, who sits on the CPAC committee, said he feels confident the issue can still be resolved if all the parties involved meet face to face. "We have to sit at the table and see if we can iron out these problems," Shortreed said. He noted the representative from Highlands East did not attend the most recent CPAC meeting.

"CPAC needs to deal with it and tell us exactly what it means," Harrison added. Algonquin Highlands won't get directly involved in the issue until that happens.

Minden Hills, which openly disagrees with the decision by Highlands East, asked the OPP to determine how the change will affect the rest of the county as far as policing is concerned.

The following are brief items from the July 17 Algonquin Highlands council meeting.

ATVs on public roads

The council chamber was packed for a presentation by Mark Lester and Mark Coles of the Haliburton ATV Association.

The two were on hand to convince council that it should allow ATVs on certain public roads that link existing crown land trails. The request comes on the heels of Bill 11, provincial legislation that gives municipalities the option of allowing ATVs to use public roads. Lester and Coles outlined the economic benefits of ATVs and described the rapid expansion of the ATV industry. ATV sales are now out-stripping snowmobile sales two to one. Reeve Eleanor Harrison said she would support ATV use on some, but not all, of the municipality's roads.

Busiest year ever for fire department

It was a busy month for the Stanhope Fire Department with 13 calls, most related to motor vehicle accidents and first response emergencies. The Department is up to 73 calls for the year, making it the busiest ever so far. As well, Fire Chief John Hogg has narrowed down the tenders for a new pumper fire truck but he's still awaiting some information from the manufacturers before making a final recommendation to council.

County wants to offer its two cents

The County of Haliburton would like to form an ad hoc committee for the rest of 2003 to work with Algonquin Highlands' airport development group. The committee's role would be to discuss the county's future involvement with the airport, and its expansion project. Council approved the idea.

Boshkung boat launch plan not fishy enough

Plans to refurbish a boat launch ramp on Boshkung Lake will have to wait for now. The Department of Fisheries and Oceans didn't approve the project because it said the municipality's original plan to compensate for lost fish habitat didn't go far enough. Algonquin Highlands plans to contact the Ministry of Natural Resources for direction on what it can do to improve fish habitat around the launch.

Election signs

Councillor Jim Hicks said he'd like to see some restrictions put on the number of election signs each candidate can put up this November. He also suggested limiting the locations where the signs can be posted. Council discussed several options for election signage but deferred a decision for another meeting.

Home Support exceeds response goal

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times Staff

Many of Haliburton County Home Support Services' clients who use the emergency response services are in Minden and thanks to the efforts of the agency staff and a very generous community, even more response units are now going to be available for clients throughout Haliburton County.

A celebratory tea was held last Thursday as donors were invited to the agency to see the units and hear about how they are being used.

Roxanne Casey, the resources development co-ordinator, says that when it was first suggested to her that they needed to raise enough money for 30 units at a cost of $350 a piece, her gut reaction was "oh no."

"I didn't think we'd make it. There are so many groups out asking for money right now. But we sent out letters about the project and it spread by word of mouth from there and it (financial support) started coming in," says Casey.

To her delight, not only did they meet the target but exceeded it with 38 units purchased.

Casey says the donors are people and groups from all walks of life and each with a different reason for supporting the cause. Lori Lloyd says she and her husband decided to fund the purchase of a unit because she understands how isolated a frail person can be at some of the lakes and how this service can enable them to live more independently in their homes - a privilege she thoroughly values.

Donna Pacey-MacDonald, executive director, says the program started with five units in 1989. Last year, 115 units were given out to clients. She added that many doctors won't allow their patients to come home after serious operations or other treatments unless the patient has an emergency response service.

The units consist of a square device with a large button on it. It can also receive a signal from a small handheld button. When the button is pushed emergency services are called automatically.

Casey says in one case a woman was bewildered to find the first response fire department at her door. Her cat had walked over the device and set it off.

In other serious cases, Casey says their clients have used the buttons to summon medical help.

FINAL 9-1-1 ROAD NAMES FOR MINDEN HILLS

The citizens of Minden Hills are invited to review the full list of road names that are the result of 9-1-1 work in the municipality. Under the Municipal Act, the public must be informed as to what names will apply to roads prior to the passing of a comprehensive municipal road-naming bylaw.

The full list appeared in the editions of the Minden Times and Haliburton County Echo published on July 14th and 15th respectively. If you do not have a copy of either paper, the list may be obtained from the municipal office in Minden or the old Lutterworth Township office during regular business hours.

Each citizen coming to the office has the opportunity to inspect a map of all the public and private roads to ascertain the status of your particular road. The name, by which that road was known in the past, will either appear intact, be changed through loss or addition of a word or replaced in its entirety. Any concerns you have may be registered with the municipality then or later for its consideration and possible referral to the County.

Inquiries may be made to the main municipal office in Minden at (705) 286-1260 or the former Lutterworth Township office at (705) 286-1541

Kawagama Lake cottagers attended their lake association's annual general meeting held July 12 at the Dorset Recreation Centre. The Kawagama Lake plan is now in draft form and association members were anxious to see it. The plan sets out a shared vision for the lake and details how that vision can be achieved.

Kawagama cottagers set out their vision for lake

by ANDY LLOYD
Times staff

After a year of hard work the Kawagama Lake Cottagers Association delivered a draft of its much anticipated lake plan to members at its annual general meeting held in Dorset on July 12.

The plan's vision statement outlines its key values: maintaining the beauty of the natural environment, pristine water quality, peace, quiet and privacy, recreation that promotes family fun, low cottage density, minimal commercial development and environmental protection of the area's plants, fish and wildlife.

At the meeting, which was very well attended, Bill MacKillican reported the results of the resident survey. Through these surveys the Association determined what issues its members were most concerned about. Boat motor noise, boat racing, speed and personal watercraft use were at the top of the list.

Fluctuating water levels is another major concern and nearly 25 per cent of the lake's cottagers are worried about the quality of that water. Development and the noise and light pollution that comes along with it also ranks high on the list of issues. Cottagers did not express much concern about the state of natural habitat and the lake's shoreline, but the plan will outline measures to preserve it regardless.

To contend with the boating issues, the KLCA established a boating committee that contacted fast boat owners to encourage safe driving and noise reduction. It will be preparing a voluntary code of conduct for all of the lake's boaters. And the committee will ask personal watercraft drivers to stay away from shorelines. Through its annual Reflections book the KLCA has already begun an educational campaign with safe boating tips. The Association will also consider the benefits of setting up a courtesy lake patrol.

Each of the identified concerns carries a similar action plan with point by point strategies for dealing with the issue.

The lake plan is still in draft form and the lake plan steering committee will continue work on it over the coming year.

After the lake plan presentation, Bruce Lewis, KLCA president, opened the second half of the meeting. Councillor Leon Jones brought greetings from Dysart et al and Reeve Eleanor Harrison spoke for Algonquin Highlands. Both highlighted good news stories from the municipalities over the past year.

Filling a vacancy on the Association's executive, members appointed Bob Campbell as their new vice-president.

There was a lively debate around a motion put forth by Doug Baker who asked the KLCA to support a proposal by the Ontario Conservative Party that would require municipalities to hold a referendum in order to raise the tax rate. There were various arguments put forth by both supporters and opponents of the idea but it was defeated when put to a vote. Most KLCA members agreed that the tax referendum idea is not the best way to solve the property tax issues they face.

The meeting concluded with a reminder that the lake's regatta is on August 2 at 11 a.m. at Moorelands Camp.

Humour in the face of adversity

If you walk into the office here at The Times any time during business hours, or even beyond "normal" business hours, you might hear somebody, somewhere in the building, laughing. It's not that we don't take our jobs seriously – we do. But a good working environment must have an element of fun to make it work. Laughter is often the oil that keeps the gears from grinding and keeps the machine running smoothly.

With the stress of working to deadlines, late breaking stories, late arriving ads, flyers and other inserts that arrive behind schedule (or not at all) or any of a host of other stressful situations, it's important to maintain a sense of humour.

Occasionally, the laughter that's heard is of the nervous variety as we struggle to cope with one calamity or another. Computers freeze, work has to be redone, e-mails take a wrong turn in Albuquerque and end up doing donuts in cyberspace for a couple of hours before finding the right path to our in-boxes... The list goes on and on.

Dealing with the obstacles is part of what makes working at a newspaper so interesting. Dull moments are few and when they do occur, somebody can usually be counted upon to start a conversation that leads to a topic, anecdote or event in which some of us will find some humour. Things often escalate from that point.

There are times when the pace becomes so hectic, usually late in the week when we are trying to beat the clock to get the paper done before deadline, when the pressure causes mistakes to be made. Last week's letter to the Editor from Ken Brown is an example. It was typeset late in the week and somehow slipped through without being proofread.

We always feel bad when something like that happens. We offer no excuses – it shouldn't have happened. All we can do is correct the mistake and be as vigilant as we can to ensure it doesn't happen again.

The only consolation is the typo in another letter that we did catch – one that could have caused considerable embarrassment, not necessarily to the writer in this case because we know he has a sense of humour. But there would have been some red faces around here had it not been caught. It is almost a certainty the world would have seen that one on The Tonight Show some Monday night during the "Headlines" segment.

It is amazing how the addition of a single letter in the wrong place can drastically change the meaning of a sentence, injecting humour where it isn't intended.

We still get a chuckle over that one – but only because it didn't slip through.

We're like a family here at The Times, much like many other successful businesses in our community. We don't always agree. We have different points of view on certain subjects. But we respect each other's right to individual opinions – warped as some of them may be!

The fact that we can joke about things that don't even get mentioned in polite company speaks volumes about how the "regulars" as well as some "irregulars" get along at The Times.

We wouldn't want it any other way.

Times readers write

Minden on the trail of ATVs

To the Editor:

I was pleased to read in last week's Times that the Minden Hills Council has agreed to study the possibility of facilitating ATV travel in the County by legalizing specific road links between designated ATV trail systems.

As one of probably a thousand or so ATV owners in the County, I think it would be great to have a mapped and legal trail system that would allow us to access Crown land from our cottages and homes without having to worry about whether or not we're breaking the law. With the number of ATV owners in Ontario growing year by year, it is obvious that having an organized trail system in the County, will go a long way toward minimizing the issues surrounding this very enjoyable and ever-growing family recreation. I hope the other municipalities follow Minden Hills' lead and agree to work co-operatively with the local ATV club.

IN OTHER WORDS

Columnists and Letters to the Editor

The winds of change

If you ever wondered where disgruntled postal workers come from, look no further than New Zealand. There, Kiwi farmers have taken to sending their legislators packages that contain cow and sheep manure and not for garden use either. No, this junk mail is part of a protest against a new greenhouse gas emission tax that penalizes farmers for the flatulence of their herds. They, in turn, are responding with what they call the "Raise a Stink" campaign — hence the packages. As you would suspect, the posties are not amused — they have to deal with this mess. Then again neither are the farmers who are being taxed, on average, an additional $300 each to pay for research that hopes to find ways to reduce methane gas emissions from farm animals. The government argues that sheep, cattle and other livestock produce more than half of New Zealand's greenhouse gases. I'm guessing that beans, wieners and sauerkraut are responsible for the rest.

I suppose if I were a farmer, I'd be a little upset too, and not just because I just licked the stamp on a manure-filled envelope. I mean $300 is a lot of money to pay just because a member of your herd lets one slip every now and again. And how do you even know it was your sheep? It's not like the animal will stand up and yell, "Hey Mary, pull my finger, and I'll give you another little lamb."

Let's face it; the government is working on the oversimplified assumption that all sheep fart. Naturally, the farmer could easily counter with the time-honoured "He who smelt it, dealt it" postulate. As we know, this has been upheld in high courts all over the world.

Personally, I'm worried about the spectre of animal farts being taxed. That's because I know plenty of fellows who regularly put out emissions that would easily rival the best efforts of a whole herd of sheep — and that's just on Super Bowl Sunday. If you think the "Raise a Stink" campaign is scary, I defy you to push these fellows into action.

Also, I'm thinking that, if this tax were carried over to humans, dropping a rose would be considered either a goods or service depending on which end of the barrel you're standing.

Therefore it would be subjected to G.S.T., which would literally force the federal government into action.

But this would also be an incredibly difficult tax to enforce. Certainly, no one is going to fill out line 345A on their tax form honestly: Number of confirmed incidents of flatulence in the last fiscal year?"

Because of this, the government would be forced to set up the C.F.C. or Canadian Flatulence Centre at an initial cost not to exceed around $2 million. And, in order to give the bureaucrats inside of it some meaningful work, someone would suggest that we register our colons — after all, though most are harmless, some are used in what could be considered criminal acts.

Suddenly, the cost of the C.F.C. and the entire program would skyrocket to about $1 billion in taxpayer money. We'd have the Flatulence Police out there writing citations to pay for this.

And since greenhouse emissions are an international problem, this would happen worldwide.

"But it was only my egg-salad sandwich officer, I swear."

"Tell it to the judge lady."

Before you know it, there'd be international protest marches where the whole world would be encouraged to fart at the exact same time. Obviously, none of this would be good for the ozone layer and if someone lit a match, intelligent life on other galaxies might soon refer to us as the "blue flaming planet."

No, nothing good can come from the government interfering with our colons. Just ask the posties.

In praise of praise

I can live for two months on a good compliment.

Mark Twain

Pardon me for asking but...has anybody told you how great you look today? I thought not. But don't think it's because you don't look good — you do.

You look wonderful. It's just that not many of us — hell, hardly any of us — take the time or the trouble to spend a few words to acknowledge the obvious and simultaneously lift the spirits of the folks who cross our paths each day.

Oh, there are the toadies and BS artists who ladle out compliments like Pez pellets. I'm talking about the lickspittle brown-nosers so deftly skewered by Billy Crystal's sycophantic one-liner "YOU LOOK FAAABULOUS!"

But that's not a compliment — that's baloney. (Not to be confused with Irish blarney. As someone once said: baloney is flattery so thick we know it's not true. Blarney is flattery so thin we like it.)

You don't have to morph reality or make up fantasies to pay someone a compliment. What's so hard about telling somebody that you like the tie they're wearing or that they're looking trim or, just that you're glad you happen to be sharing the same solar system? Doesn't cost anyone a cent and it just might turn somebody else's day around.

Ah, but it's just not in the Canadian character, is it? We're loners. Introverts. We're the people who yelp "Sorry!" when a stranger steps on OUR foot. Canucks don't come easily to the habit of shoveling out of fulsome praise.

A pity. A pity we couldn't all be a bit more like, well Ron Miller, for instance. Miller lives in Washington, D.C. and for the past 13 years he's made it his business to hang out on the street corners just...complimenting people as they stroll by.

He'll smile at a harried businessman and say "Those are beautiful shoes you've got on there." Or he'll catch the eye of some brow-beaten, deadline-dodging young sub-secretary and say "Ma'am, your hair looks just lovely this evening."

But hey, this is Washington, D.C. — crime ridden, junkie-infested and hotbed of sleazy lobbyists, tinhorn politicians and paranoid G-men.

Doesn't Miller get stone-walled, punched out or at least run in for public harassment?

Not on your life, he doesn't. The people in his neighbourhood love the guy.

They call him The Compliment Man. The most common reaction he gets, is "Thanks. You made my day!"

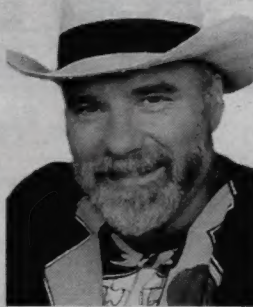

As a matter of fact, Washingtonians didn't know just how much they needed Ron Miller until he up and disappeared last month. Vanished. Vamoosed.

That was when everybody who loved the Compliment Man suddenly realized that, hey, we don't know where this guy lives, if he's got a job or a family — we don't even know his name.

One newspaper ran a feature headlined WHERE'S THE COMPLIMENT MAN? Radio stations picked up the story and a Washington TV reporter did a man-on-the-street asking locals just how much they missed their daily dose of praise.

Fittingly, the story had a happy ending.

Minden emergency facility praised for care

Attention Mr. Keith Sansford,

I would like to give a heartfelt thanks to Dr. Lauwers and the nurses at the Minden E.R. While visiting my parents this Holiday Weekend, my 6 year-old son Nathan had an anaphylactic reaction to an insect bite.

Thanks to the very quick response of the staff, Nathan had no serious repercussions and was discharged after four hours.

I have heard rumours regarding the closure of the after-hours emergency ward at the Minden Hospital. It would be very upsetting to see this shut down.

I would hate to think of how my story would have ended if I had needed to drive all the way to Haliburton Hospital.

It's times like this when you really need to speak out and appreciate the services we have here.

Thanks again.

ished by the barrage of lies and deceit flowing from the American Defence Department and the Bush White House about the invasion of Iraq.

The U.S. Secretary of Defence Donald Rumsfeld had the temerity to compare favourably the recent fall of Baghdad with the liberation of Paris, France in World War II. As a veteran of the war in Europe, I for one am offended by Mr. Rumsfeld and his casual dismissal of thousands of dead Canadian, American and British kids who paved the way to the freedom of Paris... that war was not a cake-walk through a non-existent enemy army. Given such outrageous statements, we should not be shocked that President Bush endorsed the notion that Saddam Hussein and his phantom weapons could kill a million or so Americans right in their homes.

Weapons of mass destruction or political weapons of mass deceit? My compliments to Canada for standing clear.

We need to be equally clear, however, about our respect and support for the young man from Gelert and thousands just like him... we wish them all safe return home.

Men's Golf Travel League in its third season of competition

by TOM ECCLESTONE
Special to The Times

The Haliburton Men's Golf Travel League has seen some action at various courses this season. The league consists of four teams with six players per team and the format is match play, similar to the Ryder Cup. The teams were created back in April, where four team captains drafted players from three handicap divisions with the matches then being formulated to have players compete in those divisions. A win earns the team one point and a tie receives a half point.

The first event was held May 15th at Deerhurst's Highland's Golf Course outside Huntsville. Phil Jung's team, consisting of Doug Prozak, Mike Keaney, Rick Bain, Dave Willis and Ron May earned four points to take a one point lead over two other teams. On June 12th the league visited Bigwin Island Golf Club in the Lake of Bays. The team captained by Kim Colliss came through with three and a half points to get back into contention.

Team totals going into the third of five scheduled events this summer: Team 2, captained by Phil Jung has 7 points. Team 4, captained by Ken Rosenberg has 6 points, and Teams 1 and 3, headed by Kim Colliss and Hugh Nichol, each have 5 and a half points.

The league played again this past week, but results were unavailable at press time.

New HHHS visitor policy

Effective immediately, visiting practices at Haliburton Highlands Health Services will be as follows:

Visiting hours for patients in Acute Care and residents in Hyland Crest and Highland Wood will be between the hours of 11 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Visitors will be limited to two at a time for each patient or resident.

Visitors may be requested to leave the room at any time in order for the staff to provide care for the protection of the public from communicable or infectious illness.

The ER waiting room will be reserved for patients needing ER services. Friends or family accompanying patients to the Emergency Department will continue to be asked to wait outside, wait in the main lobby of the facility or to return later to pick up the patient.

The compassionate and child exemption will remain in effect.

Visitors to the facilities are reminded to enter and exit the building through the main entrance in Haliburton and the Hyland crest entrance in Minden.

The ER entrance is to be used only by patients requiring Emergency Room care. Family and friends are reminded not to visit if they are unwell.

"The visiting policy is designed to balance the needs of the patients and residents, the staff and the public," said Keith Sansford, HHHS CEO.

"The extended hours provide family and friends more flexibility for visitation while keeping the number of visitors at any one time to a minimum. The best interest of the patient or resident is forefront as we enter the 'new normal' of health care and infection prevention and control."
